Honory heroes on a mission: turtle by turtle

PHILIP KANEKU
Special to the Honolulu Star-Bulletin

Kiholo Bay, Eight Hawaii Island children — four under 10 and four between 10 and 12 years old — School children from Kiholo Bay Elementary School are busy removing plastic from a beach. The children are part of a special team that keeps the beach clean. These are the children who are working to save the turtles. They are removing trash from the beach so that the turtles can have a better chance of survival. The team is made up of students from the second and third grade levels. The students are working hard to remove as much trash as possible. They are using shovels and brooms to clean up the area. They are also picking up trash off the beach. The team is proud of their hard work and the positive impact they are making on the environment. They believe that it is important to protect the turtles and keep the beach clean for future generations.