Jellyfish force Hanauma closure

City officials closed Hanauma Bay yesterday after an influx of box jellyfish resulted in beachgoers getting stung.

Lifeguards found 12 jellyfish in the morning and reported two people stung before park officials decided to close the bay for safety reasons, said Bryan Cheplic, Emergency Services Department spokesman.

At other beaches, lifeguards found about 300 jellyfish in Waikiki according to Ocean Safety website. The creature's sting can cause pain and can require medical attention.

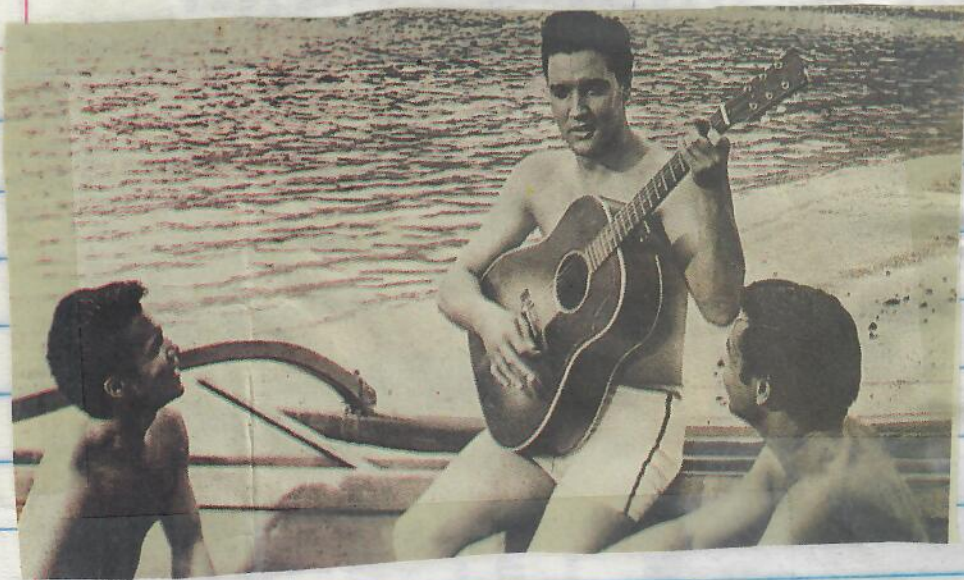

About 30 people reported being stung in Waikiki Cheplic said. "There weren't many people at the beach today, thankfully," he said.

Yesterday was the second day of a monthly jellyfish surge that can last up to four days.

A jellyfish advisory was set to expire last night for Ala Moana Beach Park, Hanauma Bay and Waikiki beaches.
