A 900-year-old statue of the Taoist deity Guan Yu is displayed in Kaohsiung, yesterday. The R.O.C. Taoism Guan Yu Promotion Association (中華道教關聖帝君弘道協會) arranged for the transportation of the statue from Luoyang, mainland China, to Taiwan for a 75-day tour. One of the goals for the tour is to call for the deity's protection against the dengue fever outbreak, the association said.

2公里人龍 爭睹燒

【陳宏銘／屏東報導】八天七夜的東港迎王祭典，昨凌晨在王船法會後，王船在信眾綿延2公里的人龍陪同下，送往鎮海公園旁海灘，黎明時分完成王船火化的送王儀式，為三年一科的迎王平安祭典

畫上句點。

王船在各轎班等人力及現場信眾投入下，遷進東港鎮海公園海灘後，工作人員先擺正、穩定船身，船身周遭堆放天庫、立桅、樹帆、請千歲上船等儀式後，清晨5時許

點火，整艘船在近凌晨6時陷入火海，人群也逐漸散去。

不太順，想藉由活動祈求自己能去煞迎福。他表示，能親眼看工作人員漏夜堆天庫、請千歲等活動細節，即使在海灘站通宵很累，卻非常值得！

China's island-building seen as tactic of control

A Pentagon report says the actions fall just shy of conflict

By Lolita C. Baldor
Associated Press

WASHINGTON >> China has reclaimed more than 3,200 acres of land in the southeastern South China Sea. But the country's focus has shifted to developing and weaponizing those man-made islands so it will have greater control over the maritime region without resorting to armed conflict, according to a new Pentagon report.

In its most detailed assessment to date of China's island-building program, the Defense Department said three of the land features in the Spratly Islands now have nearly 10,000-foot runways and large ports in various stages of construction.

And it has excavated deep channels, created and dredged harbors, and constructed communications, logistics and intelligence-gathering facilities.

The report argues that the accelerated building effort doesn't give China any new territorial rights. But it says the airfields, ship facilities, surveillance and weapons equipment will allow China to significantly enhance its long-term presence in the South China Sea.

force maritime claims, to advance their interests in ways that are calculated to fall below the threshold of provoking conflict," the report adds.

The 3,200 acres only represent China's reclamation in the Spratlys and don't include its building in the Paracels, further northwest, including the contested Woody Island, in its estimates. China has deployed anti-aircraft missiles to Woody Island.

The Pentagon declined to release details on the amount of increased reclamation in the Paracels or to provide a more concrete estimate of the increase in building in the Spratly Islands.

Chinese officials have defended the land reclamation by saying it is Beijing's territory, adding that the buildings and infrastructure are for public-service use and to support fishermen.

China's island-building, the report concludes, is designed to walk right up to — but not cross — “the threshold of provoking the United States, its allies and partners, or others in the Asia-Pacific region into open conflict.”

The report also repeats assertions by Defense Secretary Ash Carter that continued provocation by China might only improve U.S. relations in the Asia Pacific.

“This would improve China's ability to detect and challenge activities by rival claimants or third parties, widen the range of capabilities available to China, and reduce the time required to deploy them,” according to the report released Friday.

“China is using coercive tactics short of armed conflict, such as the use of law enforcement vessels to en-

“China's increasingly assertive efforts to advance its national sovereignty and territorial claims, its forceful rhetoric, and lack of transparency about its growing military capabilities and strategic decision-making continue to raise tensions and have caused countries in the region to enhance their ties to the United States,” the report said.

SOUTH CHINA SEA BUILDUP

The Pentagon says China has added more than 3,200 acres of land to several tiny reefs in the Spratly Islands, a disputed chain claimed entirely or in part by various Asian nations.

Beijing rebuked over

13 July 2016 Honolulu STAR

China puts no stock in an international panel's decision

New York Times

BEIJING >> An international tribunal in the Hague delivered a sweeping rebuke Tuesday of China's behavior in the South China Sea, including its construction of artificial islands, and found that its expansive claim to sovereignty over the waters had no legal basis.

The landmark case, brought by the Philippines, was seen as an important crossroads in China's rise as a global power and in its rivalry with the United States, and it could force Beijing to reconsider its assertive tactics in the region or risk being labeled an international outlaw. It was the first time the Chinese government had been summoned before the international justice system.

In its most significant finding, the tribunal rejected China's argument that it enjoys historic rights over most of the South China Sea. That could give the governments of Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, Taiwan and Vietnam more leverage in their own maritime disputes with Beijing.

An international tribunal on Tuesday rejected China's claim to sovereignty over the South China Sea, and said Beijing had violated international law and irreparably damaged the marine environment there. Above, the Chinese Coast Guard orders a yacht to leave Scarborough Shoal.

The tribunal also said that China had violated international law by causing "irreparable harm" to the marine environment, endangering Philippine ships and interfering with Philippine fishing and oil exploration.

"It's an overwhelming victory. We won on every significant point," said the Philippines' chief counsel in the case, Paul S. Reichler.

But while the decision is legally binding, there is no mechanism for enforcing it, and China, which refused to participate in the tribunal's proceedings, reiterated Tuesday that it would not abide by it.

Speaking at a meeting with European leaders, President Xi Jinping was defiant, reasserting China's claim to sovereignty over the South China Sea "since ancient times," the state-run People's Daily reported. His remarks echoed a statement from the Foreign Ministry. The tribunal's decision "is invalid and has no binding force," the ministry said.

The U.S. pressed China to abide by the ruling, framing it as an opportunity for Beijing to show it's the "global power it professes itself to be."

In unusually strong comments Tuesday after the decision, State Department spokesman John Kirby said the world was watching to see whether China would obey the decision.

The foreign secretary of the Philippines, Perfecto Yasay Jr., welcomed the ruling as "significant" and called on "all those concerned to exercise restraint and sobriety."

(U.S. Sen. Brian Schatz, D-Hawaii, a member of the Senate Defense Appropriations Subcommittee, issued a statement calling on China to "accept the ruling and refrain from any provocative behavior." It continued, "It is time for China to stop its unilateral efforts to redraw the region's maritime boundaries and suspend building artificial features.")

The five judges and legal experts on the tribunal ruled unanimously, and the decision was so heavily in favor of the Philippines that there were fears about how the Chinese leadership would react. Many in the region worry that Beijing will accelerate its efforts to assert control over the South China Sea, which includes vital trade routes and fishing waters as well as possible oil and mineral deposits.

"Xi Jinping has lost face here, and it will be difficult for China to do nothing," said Bonnie S. Glaser, a senior adviser for Asia at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington. "I expect a very tough reaction from China, since it has lost on almost every point."

The Philippines filed its case in 2013, after China seized a reef over which both countries claim sovereignty. There has been speculation that Beijing might respond to the decision by building an artificial island at the reef, Scarborough Shoal, a move that could set off a conflict with the Philippines and its treaty ally, the United States.

The main issue before the panel was the legality of China's claim to waters within a "nine-dash line" that appears on official Chinese maps and encircles as much as 90 percent of the South China Sea. The Philippines had asked the tribunal to find the claim to be in violation of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea, which both China and the Philippines have ratified.

In its decision, the tribunal said any historic rights to the sea that China had previously enjoyed "were extinguished" by the treaty, which lays out rules for drawing zones of control over the world's oceans based on distances to coastlines. The panel added that while China had used islands in the sea in the past, it had never exercised exclusive authority over the waters.

Bloomberg News contributed to this report.
