NAME METFORMIN SCHOOL _____

ADDRESS _____

Maryknoll School
90 years of m

Maryknoll School just celebrated its 90th year in Hawaii. Its story began Sept. 2, 1927, when six young and adventurous Maryknoll Sisters and a young priest from New York stepped off the liner City of Honolulu onto tropical soil for the first time. They were answering Catholic Bishop Stephen Alencastre's call to open a new missionary school in Hawaii. This school would be different from the traditional European-modeled schools already established in Hawaii.

 苗栗縣盛產各式水果，但山區果園近年來深受獼猴危害，農民損失不貲。林務局與學術單位去年開始試辦補助農民電圍網的防制方法，獲得不錯成效。苗栗縣不產農戶，電圍網視為防猴的「救星」。

他說，400公尺長度圍網設置費用因材料不同，從8萬元到20多萬元不等。林務局委託獼猴害農作的調查及防治，採取電圍網防堵猴害，在全省幾處示範點都有不錯成效。

Characterization and Conservation Concerns of Green Turtles (Chelonia mydas) Nesting in Hong Kong, China¹

PS 2014

Connie Ka-yan Ng,^{2,5} Peter H. Dutton,³ Simon Kin-fung Chan,² Ka-sbing Cheung,² Jian-wen Qiu,⁴ and Ya-nan Sun⁴

Abstract: Hong Kong has one of the last remaining nesting populations of endangered green turtles (Chelonia mydas) in southern China. Because nesting individuals are vital to sustain populations, this study characterizes and reports essential baseline information about nesting pattern, postnesting movement, and genetic composition of green turtles nesting in Hong Kong to provide a basis for effective scientific-based management of this migratory species. The number of nesters observed in Hong Kong was relatively low compared with other rookeries in southern China, but the nesting pattern in terms of clutch size and internesting interval was comparable with that of other nearby rookeries. These nesters are likely a remnant of a small population previously depleted as a result of historical harvesting of eggs in Hong Kong. Based on available DNA sequences and literature, we identified two mtDNA haplotypes, CmP18 (which is also common in the rookery in Taiwan) and a novel endemic haplotype (CmP116). We found significant differentiation based on haplotype frequencies between populations in Hong Kong and Lanyu, Taiwan, indicating that these nesting populations are demographically isolated. Loss of these populations would therefore result in loss of genetic diversity for this species in the region. Satellite tracking of the local nesters revealed postnesting movement to foraging habitats in Vietnam and Hainan Island. International cooperation and consistent dedicated research are of paramount importance to conservation and recovery of green turtle assemblages in the region.

Nesting Pattern of Green Turtles

Nesting Site	No. of Nesting Green Turtles per Season	Clutch Size
Sham Wan, Lamma Island, Hong Kong	0-5	93-152
Huidong Gangkou National Sea Turtle Nature Reserve	1-20	Mean=113
Wan-an Island, Penghu Archipelago	2-19	70-154
Lanyu Island	3-11	73-110

CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS

The genetic distinction of the remnant breeding green turtle population in Hong Kong, as indicated by the newly reported haplotype, infers uniqueness to the genetic diversity of the population. Despite the small size of the breeding population, conservation is of high regional ecological importance in terms of genetic diversity, given the continuing threats and the generally depleted status of green turtle nesting populations in the South China Sea relative to historical records and to current abundance in other regions (Zhang 1996, Chan et al. 2007, Wang and Li 2008). Loss of the few nesters remaining in Hong Kong would result in an important loss of genetic diversity in the region, which escalates the level of conservation concern for the species. It is critical to strengthen and enforce legal protection, and to continue and expand monitoring and research of nesting populations at potential nesting sites in the region. Reinforcement of regional cooperation will facilitate concerted conservation efforts to protect this shared migratory species. Future research studies in Hong Kong and southern China should focus on habitat use and genetic composition of foraging or migrating sea turtles to identify and mitigate threats to the wild population for the recovery of the green turtle assemblage in the area.

Subject: Schedule for Tomorrow

Aloha kākou,

Just wanted to update you folks on a tentative schedule the crew and I just discussed for tomorrow:

- 8:15 - pick up at lower campus parking lot, brief introductions/overview of the day
- 8:45 - arrive at Hi'i, introduction to area/history, native and invasive plant identification
- 9:15-10:30 - stewardship work (weeding and planting trees); we're thinking the student would be split into 3-4 groups with a few adults in each group during this portion--what are your thoughts/suggestions?
- 10:30-11:15 - lunch - we realize this is a little early..please let us know if you think this will be a problem
- 11:15 - leave Hi'i for the east side of the island
- 11:45 - stop along Keomoku road to observe the landscape/effects of erosion from the vans - getting out at this area may take too much time so observation from the vans

Richard's Market improvements

A trench being dug to across 8th Street in front of Richard's Market will hold a fiber optic cable to provide the market with high speed internet. Although the road had to be closed off for several days at the end of October and early November, shoppers took the roadwork in stride as they know it will decrease their waiting time at the checkout counter!

Tiep Nguyen, the owner of T-Square Engineering and Construction LLC, is doing the trench work and will also be the contractor working to improve the area directly outside of the store. Plans are to level the ground where the picnic tables are now and to replace the gravel with paving to make it safer for customers.

One of the construction workers on this project has deep ties to Lanai. Kehau Moku is the great-grandson of Ernest and Rebecca Richardson. "Uncle Ernest," as he was fondly known to generations of Lanai children, was one of the last cowboys at Lanai Ranch, which closed in the early 1950s. "Aunty Becca" was the beloved hanai aunty to all of the ranch and town kids who showed up at her kitchen table to eat her pancakes and biscuits. Kehau's maternal grandmother, Suki Nakoia, was the family's historian during her lifetime; she kept clippings of almost every article and photograph of Koele and Lanai that was published. His great-grandmother, Roadwork underway on 8th Street.

Kehau's family lives on Oahu now but it is very nice to see ohana from the Richardson family working on Lanai again with Tiep Nguyen's company. Kehau's mother Belinda and his grandfather, Buddy Nakoia, have also returned to Lanai to visit.

42-foot yacht runs aground on Lanai

Contributed by Maui Fire Department

Lanai firefighters received a call from the U.S. Coast Guard at 3:10 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 21, requesting assistance with a vessel that grounded on the reef about a mile northwest of Club Lanai. Firefighters arrived at 4:19 p.m. and found the motor yacht stuck on the reef about 300 yards from shore. A 45-foot response boat from Coast Guard Station Maui arrived on scene but could not get close enough to the grounded vessel because of shallow waters.

Firefighters on shore swam out to the vessel and found two men and three women onboard. They swam a couple in their 70s back to shore. The fire department's Air-1 helicopter airlifted two women and the male owner off of the yacht, and delivered them safely to crews on shore at 5:30 p.m. There were no injuries.

Lanai firefighters transported the five individuals to the Manele small boat harbor. The yacht owner's friend arrived from Maui in a private boat and gave them a lift back to Lahaina.

The owner of the yacht, from Kaanapali, Maui had been cruising Lanai's eastern shore along with his wife, a daughter in her 50s, and a couple visiting Maui, when they somehow ran aground on the reef.

The yacht's hull did not appear to be damaged and no fuel or oil were observed leaking when crews left the scene Saturday. The owner will coordinate with the Department of Land and Natural Resources on the removal of the vessel from the reef. The vessel is home-ported in Lahaina, Maui.

New business flying high over Lanai

Years ago, Harvey Gaceta purchased a small, battery-powered, model helicopter from Radio Shack. The sales agent sold him Radio Shack's insurance plan; if you crashed while learning to fly it, you could send it back to them to be repaired as many times as you liked. They lost money on Harvey, but about 10 crashes later, he was hooked on flying!

Staying indoors only, Harvey learned to fly around furniture, down hallways, and through doors before venturing outdoors with it. After mastering flying the helicopter outdoors, drones were just beginning to enter the market and it was next on his "to-do" list. Although the transition did not happen overnight, he says, "Once I started flying drones, I became a bird in the sky."

However, as more people began to purchase drones, regulations for them became more restrictive as many people felt they were intrusive and violated their privacy. Understanding their concerns, Harvey's next goal was to become certified and licensed by the Federal Aviation Authority. The examinations were tough, he said, but he passed after his second try at the extensive exam.

Harvey comes from a family of self-starters. His siblings all have their own businesses: a real estate broker, real estate appraiser, an accountant, a horse trainer, and an electrician.

Harvey started his own landscaping business that continues to do well but now, the open skies are calling.

Although he will continue his landscaping work in the community, he will be offering his aerial photography services as a fully licensed and certified drone pilot. Contact him at 808-203-0305 to discuss potential projects. Congratulations on earning your drone pilot's license and starting a new business, Harvey!

Critical Beach Habitat for Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle Endangered Before Mid-Century

Many Hawaiian beaches provide critical habitat for the Hawaiian Green Sea Turtle (Chelonia Mydas). However, sea level rise drives beaches and dunes to migrate landward where they may encounter roads and other types of developed lands. Where developed lands are threatened by coastal erosion, defined as a distance of 20 ft (6.1 m) by state rules, property owners are eligible to apply for an emergency permit. These have historically led to coastal armoring. Seawalls and revetments on chronically receding shorelines cause permanent beach loss by restricting sand supply to the beach in front of the sea wall, as well as to beaches adjacent to the restrictive structure (flanking). This study focuses on four primary beach habitats along the North Shore of Oahu, Hawai'i: Waimea, Haleiwa, Kawaihoa, and Mokuleia. We utilize GIS techniques to apply spatial analysis of nesting and basking locations collected from the National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration (NOAA). We then estimate the number of homes and the length of shoreline threatened by coastal armoring for 0 m, 0.17 m, 0.32 m, 0.60 m, and 0.98 m of sea-level rise. We demonstrate that 0.17 m of sea level rise impacts ~31% of all beach front homes, and 4.6 km of shoreline, or ~21% of the total shoreline. An increase to 0.32 m of sea level rise impacts ~42% of all beach front homes, and 5.8 km of shoreline, or ~31% of the total shoreline. The upper bound of the most recent sea level rise projection by the International Panel on Climate Change (IPCC RCP 8.5) affirms that 0.17 m of sea level rise may be reached by 2030, and 0.32 m by 2050. This sea level projection is a "worst-case" under IPCC-AR5, however, Sweet et al. (2017) depicts this as an "Intermediate" scenario on the basis of faster than expected mass loss by Greenland and Antarctica ice sheets, and rapid heat uptake and thermal expansion by the world's oceans. We conclude that the impacts of sea level rise and reactive coastal armoring currently endanger critical habitat for the Hawaiian Green Sea turtle (Chelonia Mydas). The results of this study suggest that decision-makers need to act without delay in developing habitat management plans to protect and preserve Hawai'i's shorelines, and conserve critical habitats for the Hawaiian Green Sea turtle and other indigenous species.
