I thought you'd be interested to know of a sighting at the time mentioned above, of a turtle approximately 30' off the Lelipema pier in a direct line towards the lighthouse on C.I. The turtle was (est) 3' from rear of shell to front of shell - with two very prominent barnacles near the high spot of the shell. He was on the surface heading in a northerly direction and remained there for about 3 minutes before diving.

They may be endangered, but still a few around apparently!

Cheers.
