

April 29, 1981

Dear

Probably one of the most important activities that we can regularly undertake as members of the IUCN Marine Turtle Group is to exchange current information on the biology and conservation of sea turtles. The foundation of this "information network" would, in my view, be the timely distribution of journal reprints, reports and other publications authored by Group Members. I would therefore like to suggest that each of us adopt a policy of automatically sending out such material to all Group members as soon as it is available for distribution. A few individuals have already undertaken this courtesy, but most of us (including myself) have not been doing it on a regular basis.

If for some reason you feel that this is not a good idea, by all means please write to me expressing your views.

Sincerely,

George H. Balazs