George,

I talked to both these doctors and they seemed confident that it was indeed a turtle moving up and down the beach. I have yet to visit this beach as it requires obtaining permission and a pass from Molokai Ranch. When you come over, we can do it together. For your 'info... I probably will be on Maui from the 21st to the 25th of this month.

There was another set of tracks apparently going back into the water. We saw the tracks in the morning. Since this area is relatively remote, we often see turtles in the water. This incident occurred during January of this year.

I photographed during the summer of 1928 on Molokai, and at that time noticed about half a dozen large turtles - don't know the species - see the sketch.

I doubt they were basking, or having seen me, Hawaiian Other comments: companion they were crawling forward the ocean. Some orange crates (?) had been cast upon the beach & the Hawaiian tried to prevent a turtle from reaching the water by holding the crate in front of it. It was so strong, it easily escaped. We would never have killed it.
