MICKEY'S INDIAN TOM-TOM

Here is the way to make an Indian tom-tom like the one Mickey played in Frontierland. You will need a large bowl—a wooden chopping bowl would be perfect. For a cover, or drumhead, use parchment paper soaked in warm water and wrung out, or four pieces of wrapping paper glued together and pressed under something heavy until almost dry. While your cover is still slightly damp, punch holes about three inches apart and an inch in from the edge and fit it over the top of the bowl. Then turn the bowl upside down and secure the drumhead with a few thumb-tacks while you tie a heavy cord or leather lacing around the bowl about three inches from the opening. Now, loosely weave heavy cord or leather lacing through the holes of your cover and under the circle around the bowl. (See Fig. 1.) When this is completed, pull the lacing tight to make your drumhead as taut as possible. Decorate your tom-tom with one of the Indian designs below and it will be ready to play, either by beating it with your finger tips or any kind of drum-stick you choose.
